

18 January, 1907

Dear Mr. Brewster,

I am afraid that I shall not be able to be of much help to you, for I am not in touch with the English colony in London, and I cannot think of anyone who would be able to give helpfully to a stranger. I feel, indeed, that without knowing more about you, the work, trade or profession, the reasons why you do the thing, we will be unable to find anyone, even English people, who would give a reliable opinion in that matter. What is essential is that we should be able to get some sort of reference.

I am very sorry not to be able to be more helpful.

Yours sincerely,

